How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

BY J. O. LEWIS

The Strength of the Wheel.

THE wheel, composed of hub, spokes and tire, is one of the most useful and one of the strongest of man's mechanical devices. It also illustrates well the manner in which various parts are needed to make a perfect whole. A GOOD TOWN, A CENTER OF TRADE, RESEMBLES A WHEEL. With all of its contributing factors closely wedged in like the spokes fit into the hub of a wheel the prosperous country surrounding it holds it together like the tire holds the wheel.

So long as all parts are in place the device runs smoothly and is a perfect machine. Remove a spoke and THE WHEEL AT ONCE BECOMES WEAKER and is no stronger than its weakest point.

TO HAVE AND TO MAINTAIN A GOOD SOLID TOWN EVERY KIND OF BUSINESS MUST BE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED. AND AROUND THESE MUST BE UNITED PEOPLE WORKING FOR THE COMMON GOOD.

Destroy the mercantile business or the manufacturing business or the banking business and, like removing a spoke from the wheel, you weaken the interests of the whole.

Send your money to mail order houses or patronize merchants in other cities and you take away that patronage which rightfully belongs to the home merchant and thereby undermine the business of the town. All classes or kinds of business are so closely related and interlocking that when you damage one you damage all.

But we have a beautiful little city, prosperous, growing and happy, and in it we have some of the best merchants, banks, mills, jobbers and factories, conducted by as fine a set of men as you will find anywhere on earth. We have fine schools, handsome churches, excellent public utilities and many fine buildings the equal of any city of its size in the entire country, and ALL MADE POSSIBLE BY THE BUSINESS MEN—big hearted, progressive and aggressive hustlers and boosters.

There is hardly a day that the business men—merchants, banks, jobbers, mills, etc.—are not called on to make a subscription or donation to some institution or some worthy cause—to do something, if you please, for greater building or better living. And that they generously give and have given is proved in the many institutions we have for the intellectual, moral and the spiritual uplift of our citizens. Therefore, when you solicit a subscription from these business men of your home city you should feel in duty bound to give them what assistance you can and to always patronize them to the exclusion of others and outsiders.

THE VALUE OF YOUR HOME, THE RENTAL OF YOUR PROPERTY, THE PRICE OF LOTS—ALL ARE BASED ON THE SUCCESS OF YOUR BUSINESS MEN.

If the town has a lot of vacant stores, idle factories, mills running on half time, there can be no substantial value to property. Therefore, to keep the stores rented, the dwellings occupied and a general good tone to property values it is necessary that you GIVE TO YOUR HOME PEOPLE YOUR ENTIRE SUPPORT.

Patronizing mail order houses is not altogether limited to poor people or to farmers or to people who do not know the hurt they are doing the home town, but is a common practice among certain well known, well to do men. I believe this is more the result of thoughtlessness and of being misled by embellished and highly exaggerated descriptions than through a spirit of antagonism to the home merchant. Moreover, I firmly believe that when you think over this matter seriously and carefully, analyzing it in every detail, that hereafter YOU WILL GIVE YOUR HOME MERCHANT YOUR TRADE.

FRATERNAL ORDERS

The Fraternal Brotherhood.

A check was received from the supreme lodge by the treasurer of the local lodge during the past week for $1000, it being the full value of the certificate carried by our late Bro. Geo. W. Bechtel. The same was paid to his beneficiary, Sister Laura Bechtel. She appreciated it more than words can tell, and cannot speak to highly of the Brotherhood. A. A. Whitten.

CIVIC INTEREST AROUSED.

Personal Hoardings Invested In Municipal Stock—The Cities Aided In Troublous Times and Securities Widely and Wisely Distributed.

The idea of buying at home has been carried one step further by at least two American cities which have recently sold their goods at home. These goods consisted of municipal bonds, usually disposed of in some foreign market and money center. While cities are selling their bonds in distant centers and sending the interest away annually, there remains at home thousands and thousands of dollars hoarded up by local people who are willing and anxious to invest it in the bonds if given the opportunity. This has been demonstrated in St. Paul and Baltimore.

Back of the experiments in St. Paul lies an interesting bit of history. That city some time ago discovered that it could secure better work or street improvement by day labor than by contract, and its charter was so amended so as to admit the desired change. The amended charter still provided that improvement bonds should be sold after bids had been received and contracts let, but before work had begun. It did not cover the conditions for day labor on the bond side apparently. Therefore when $200,000 worth of 6 per cent paving bonds were issued there arose a question as to their legality, and brokers were rather shy of them.

A bank inquired into the matter, obtained expert advice and found that the bonds were legally all right. It therefore purchased freely and, to see what could be done in the way of interesting the small investors, put before one of the leading department stores of the city a plan to dispose of the bonds over its counter. The store's heads fell into the plan at once, took the bonds, announced a sale on a certain day, the bonds to be sold at the price paid for them and guaranteed so that no investor need have any fear about getting his money back at any time. A limit of $1,000 to each purchaser was fixed. In all $90,000 worth of bonds were disposed of in five hours. The purchasers were for the most part women, and the average purchase was about $250. The money came from local savings banks, from the postal savings banks and from personal hoardings.

Shortly after this another issue of $25,000 worth of bonds for a municipal playground was offered. A bank took the entire issue and announced to the public that it would sell, with these bonds as security, trust certificates in denominations of $10, no purchaser to receive above $100 worth. The sale of these certificates was quite as successful as that at the department store.

In the city of Baltimore the finance commissioners opened bids for an issue of $5,500,000 of 4 per cent city stock which had been duly advertised for sale. The bids received totaled only $559,000. By rejecting bids below 90 and accrued interest the commissioners were enabled to award but $427,000. The sale was a distinct failure. Within ten days, however, the whole issue had been disposed of at 90 and interest. A direct appeal to the people and a sale over the counter to small investors, proposed and carried into effect by a Baltimore newspaper, accomplished this end.

During those ten days the money market was in the worst condition it has been in since 1907. With that in mind the paper anticipated the failure of the city to dispose of the full issue and had announced that it would place a small block of the bonds stock on sale in denominations of $100 and multiples of that amount. For this purpose it secured $10,000 worth and placed it on sale. In two hours it was gone, and more was sent for. The first day's sale amounted to $43,500. On the second day $73,000 was disposed of and on the third $121,400. Orders were pouring in by every train. A week after the sale was announced the city made it known that it had all the money it needed and would withdraw the unsold portion of the stock and hold it for a better market. But it allowed two days of grace to intending purchasers, and in that time the whole issue was disposed of.

Customers included farmers and preachers, teachers and mechanics and men and women in every grade of life. One mechanic brought $5,000 in bills, which he had been keeping for years in his house. A priest bought five shares of stock "to provide for his funeral." A woman came hatless and in gingham apron having to leave her house in that way to avoid suspicion on the part of her son, who wanted to take away from her the money she proposed to invest. Many fathers invested in the stock for their children.

The object, apart from helping out the city in a troublous time and getting hoarded money into circulation, was to distribute the city's securities as widely as possible in the hope that possession of the stock would arouse in the owners a civic interest and make for efficiency and economy in the municipal administration.

HOW MERCHANTS FOUGHT
TOWN'S CALAMITY TALK

Psychology Counts Much When Pessimism Reigns In Community.

"It's the psychology of the thing that counts," said a traveling man recently. "You know how a slump will hit a town once in awhile for no apparent reason at all? That's just the way it was down in Missouri—a good little town, 25,000 or more. Everything had been lovely there, and some fool started a calamity howl when business began to drop off a little in the dull season. The suggestion worked. People forgot it was a dull season and began asking every one else what was the trouble with the town."

"One day one of the town's big merchants sat down and figured it out. He traced the rumors back to find their real foundation and discovered the reason to be nothing at all. He found that at the time the talk started the town was doing a better business than it ever had done in the dull season. And then he saw the psychology of the calamity talk. Once seeing it, he determined to fight fire with fire."

"The next day he called the merchants of his block into his office and told them what he had discovered. For awhile there was trouble in making them see things his way, but at last he succeeded. Then he outlined his plan, and they agreed to do as he said."

"The result was that within a few days in the display windows of every merchant in that block were large signs announcing the fact that business was good and getting better every minute, that there was nothing to be discouraged about—in fact, everything was lovely. Following this, every merchant advertised in the evening paper with a catch line something like this:

"We're in the Prosperity Block and Doing a Good Business."

"Soon the other merchants saw the optimism of the merchants in this 'prosperity' block was attracting trade. And so they joined the procession. They put placards in their windows boasting of their good business and the faith that it was going to be better right along. Soon the whole town was doing it. With prosperity dinned at them right along the citizens caught the spirit, and now—well, now the town is one of the most booming little places in Missouri. Psychology did it."

FINES WEIGHED 64 POUNDS.

Montclair School Children's Penalties Worth $404.

William W. Taylor, assistant secretary of the Montclair (N. J.) board of education, entered the office of Town Treasurer Samuel H. Wenck, in the Municipal building, carrying a package containing pennies, dimes and five cent pieces worth $404. The package weighed sixty-four pounds.

Whenever a pupil breaks a window in one of the schools buildings, tears a book carelessly or does any one of a dozen other things which cause loss to the taxpayers a small fine is imposed. These fines are collected by the principals of the schools. The money is eventually put to the credit of the school repair account. The fines range anywhere from 1 cent to 25 cents.

The practice of fining the children for damaging the books is opposed by some of the citizens of the town, who contend that such destruction is only to be expected from children and that the annual appropriation for books should cover this.

Color Schemes In Gardens.

We should pay more attention to color schemes in local gardens. Where much massing of trees and shrubs is done why not have reds and yellows all on one side, with other colors and shades mixed with white upon the other? Such harmony of arrangement by color of blossoms would appeal to even the most careless observer and bring great joy to the soul of every true artist. The suggestions given are but crude, but through study of the subject the planter may overcome jarring incongruities.

ATTRACTIVE FRONT YARDS.

Beauty of Neighborhood Enhanced by Flowers, Grass or Shrubs.

Any person with even a small yard may make it a most attractive spot by proper care. There is no land on which flowers, grass or shrubs will not grow if properly treated. A beautiful corner of a front yard not only adds to the attractiveness of that particular place, but the entire street and neighborhood is made more beautiful by the presence of flowers or shrubs.

In the accompanying photograph is shown a corner of a yard located on the street of a great city. It is the only yard in the vicinity, and the magnificent shrubs, which are kept green for such a great part of each year, attracts the attention and admiration of all who pass by.

It may be necessary to highly fertilize the soil and plant the flowers or shrubs that are peculiarly adapted for any locality, but time and money spent in this manner will bring large returns in the end and add greatly to the beauty of the entire city.

MERCHANTS SHOULD DEMAND
PROMPT PAYMENT OF BILLS

Abuse of Charge Account Due to Carelessness—Cash System Best.

Some people become careless about paying the bills of the local storekeeper. It is not that they are dishonest; they are simply careless. "Oh, I've been dealing with that man for years now, and he won't mind waiting awhile," they will say as the first bill is poked away and forgotten until another reminds them of the unsettled obligation.

A local storekeeper cannot go on doing business at the same old stand and render satisfaction and the best possible equivalent for the money without his customers' co-operation. A cog will slip here and a cog will slip there in any business when this sort of thing continues indefinitely, and the home merchant realizes it has become a practice.

On the other hand, a prompt response to the merchant's first bill will be rewarded. It will place a well stocked store at your disposal and a list of prices that does not have to be fixed with an eye to the debtors' list.

While it is commendable to pay your tradesman's bills promptly, it is better still never to open a charge account. Pay for each article when you buy it and join the ranks of the local merchant's best friends, better friends even than those who pay once a week or once a month.

As a matter of fact, this charge account idea is nothing less than a personal favor which a storekeeper is not obliged to grant. It is a favor that is not granted by the mail order concerns. But when a storekeeper permits a customer to go on his books the least that customer can do is to settle his account without delay. How this prompt return courtesy will rebound to the customer's advantage has already been pointed out.

FOUNDERS OF THE CITY OF SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO

THE SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO LAND AND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY designed in its original plan to make of South San Francisco a great manufacturing center. With that object in view, it originally purchased 3500 acres of land in San Mateo County, on the bay front, five miles south of the City of San Francisco. Since the original purchase, the company has added greatly to its holdings by the purchase of large tracts of adjoining lands, giving to it a perfect environment for the complete development of a great manufacturing city.

The faith which this Company had in its enterprise has been manifest to everyone by the large expenditure it has made in the development of this property. Every foundation which goes to make a perfect condition for manufacture has been already solidly installed, and is a rapidly growing city; it is a railroad terminal; it is on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and accessible to all railroads; has deep water communication; owns and operates for its industries a railroad connecting with the Southern Pacific and the water front; has electric street car service from factory to Town, and direct to San Francisco; has an Electric Light and Power Company; owns an independent Water Works, and has an abundance of fresh water for factory and house; has wharves and docks; a perfect sewerage system; a Bank and a Town Hall; and a population of over 3000 people an extensive and fine residence district, where everyone may secure lands at reasonable prices and on favorable terms, as homes for themselves and their families.

FACTORY SITES

can be obtained from the South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company on most reasonable terms.

The completion of the Bay Shore Tunnels has placed South San Francisco on the main lines of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and forty passenger trains per day connect it with the outside world.

Owing to the completion of the Dumbarton Bridge and Cutoff, South San Francisco will soon have all railroads which center in San Francisco passing through its midst.

Many industries are already established here, chief of which are the Western Meat Company, the Wool Pullery, the Soap Works, the Steiger Pottery Works, the W. P. Fuller & Co. Paint Works, the South San Francisco Lumber and Supply Company, the Pacific Coast Steel Company, the Pacific Car and Equipment Company, the Standard Corrugated Pipe Works, and other enterprises, all of which are in operation to-day. The Meese Gottfried Machinery Company and the Enterprise Foundry of San Francisco have each recently made purchases of land, and South San Francisco is plainly destined to fulfill all that its promoters had hoped.

HOME-OWNERSHIP.

Last week we talked to workmen about the ownership of a home along the lines of the waste of time, money and chances for advancement, suffered by the homeless man, through moving from place to place.

There are other taxes, or losses from which the tenant cannot by any possibility escape. The rent tax heads the list.

This tax takes on the average, from one-sixth to one-fifth of the worker's wages. Think of it!

The common laborer with a wage of $2.50 per day, or $65 per month, must pay from ten to fifteen dollars per month as rent for his dwelling place. The money paid as rent amounts in twelve to fifteen years, to the full value of the domicile, yet the poor tenant does not own so much as a shingle or a nail in the structure in which he lives.

The rent tax is ever present and inevitable. It never ceases. In times of illness or enforced idleness it goes on remorselessly, consuming the bread and devouring the food of the family; and when age and failing strength come, its demands continue and will not be denied. And so it is through every grade of wage or salary. The rent tax is ruthless, it does not ask, it takes one fifth of the worker's pay. The only escape from this terror is in home-ownership.

The homeless man is subject to yet another serious loss. Even with regular employment in a permanent place, there are always idle hours and idle days, in the life of every worker. The tenant has no incentive to cause him to apply his idle time in improving the property of his landlord, therefore as a general rule he squanders these precious hours and days about town, and with the waste of his time, parts with much of his hard-earned wages.

These hours and days are utilized by the home owner in improving and beautifying his home. The home-owner is settled for life. He has an interest in the soil. His home is a center, a nucleus, about which he gathers substance to make subsistence easier, and existence comfortable as age comes creeping on.

VIC SMITH IS ROBBED IN CHINA

The following taken from The China Daily Outlook, published in Hongkong, China, and dated Friday, June 26th, 1913, is of interest to residents of this city and county:

"Day before yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Smith, accompanied by their two small sons, arrived in the colony by the Steamship Korea, as Mr. Smith is taking over the charge of the Dollar Steamship Company's office here. The family registered at the Hongkong Hotel and were assigned to a suite of rooms, the bedroom number of which is 256.

"A representative of The China Outlook heard vague rumors of a robbery having been committed in the rooms that were occupied by Mr. Smith, and in an interview with the gentleman in question and Mrs. Smith he gleaned the following facts:

"Mrs. Smith said, 'I am always a light sleeper, whereas Mr. Smith sleeps heavily, and at 4 o'clock I was awakened by the sound of something shuffling on the balcony. I sat up in bed and saw a white jacketed figure pass by the open door that leads to the piazza. Knowing nothing of the rules of the hotel, I thought that it was probably a watchman on his rounds and laid down again. It could not have been many minutes, and I was almost asleep, when I saw the figure of a man creeping about Mr. Smith's clothes and going through the pockets. I was fascinated by the quiet way in which he worked, as I could discern his hands feeling everywhere. I took Morris (Mr. Smith) by the arm and told him there was a man in the room. Mr. Smith jumped up and as he did so the thief ran for the balcony. Mr. Smith caught him, however, and Mrs. Smith continued with a smile, 'he will tell you the rest.'

"'Yes, I got him,' Mr. Smith said, 'and the first punch that I gave him left me this as a souvenir.' Mr. Smith exhibited a smashed first knuckle on the first finger of his right hand that was badly swollen. When asked as to the loss that he had in the way of valuables, Mr. Smith said that it only amounted to a little change that he had put on the bureau prior to going to bed, and that the confederate of the man who did the actual stealing got away with that.

"Yesterday afternoon crowds collected in front of the Hongkong Hotel to see the thief, or one of the thieves, who attempted to rob Mr. and Mrs. Smith. He was in the stocks and being publicity exhibited, with many Chinese inscriptions on the board that hung around his neck, describing his crime and the penalty therefor. Two big Sikh policemen stood guard over the prisoner and well looked to it that he could not make his position a comfortable one. At first there was a good deal of astonishment caused by the sight of a man in stocks on one of the most public thoroughfares, but the sentence that was passed (and that is a usual one in similar cases) is that the criminal shall sit in stocks for the number of hours to which he is sentenced opposite the scene of his crime."

Mr. Smith was the transportation manager of the South San Francisco Belt Line Railway in this city and was very popular with all who knew him. Besides the Dollar Company, Mr. Smith represents the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railway Company in China.

Anna Bernard, known in Colorado as the "Cattle Queen," was acquitted in Steamboat Springs by a jury of the charge of cattle stealing, upon which she had been on trial. Immediately upon report of the jury's verdict Queen Anna and her friends leased all the motion picture theaters in the town for the night, and all business houses and saloons closed, while the people of the city celebrated her acquittal with her.

TERSE CALIFORNIA NEWS

State Controller Alfred Bourne Nye is dead at his home in San Francisco, ending a career of more than ten years in the State's service. His death was caused by pneumonia.

M. J. Hynes, Public Administrator of San Francisco, had his right arm broken, and four others who were in his automobile were slightly injured when the car turned turtle in a street of San Jose.

An invitation to all of the navies of the world to meet at Hampton Roads in January, 1915, and pass through the Panama Canal to the Panama Exposition at San Francisco, accompanied by a fleet from the United States Navy, will shortly be issued by President Wilson. The invitation will be in the form of a proclamation.

The San Francisco Civil Service Commission had a special meeting to decide what name should be adopted for the three women who are to be appointed on the police force, but a conclusion was not reached. This commission wanted to designate them "social service inspectors," while the Police Board favored calling them "women protective officers."

With the official gauge registering a depth of three feet seven inches, there is less water flowing in the Sacramento River than at any time in the last sixty-four years. The lowest stage ever recorded was zero in 1856. In 1862 the records show 2.4 feet. Lack of rainfall and the vast amount of water now being taken from the channel for irrigation purposes are held responsible for the scant supply.

One prominent San Francisco business man, George L. Alexander, Pacific Coast manager of the American Type Founders' Company of San Francisco, was killed outright, another was perhaps fatally injured, and two women who gave Oakland addresses injured, though not seriously, as a result of an automobile accident which occurred on the county road between San Mateo and Belmont, San Mateo County.

Excellent specimens of ore have been discovered in the vicinity of Slug Gulch, in Placer County, and a company capitalized at $400,000 has been formed to exploit the rich claims. Some of the specimens have averaged as high as $60 to the ton, according to assays made in Sacramento and in San Francisco. The newly organized company expects to start work as soon as the streams are full of water and will rush operations.

Eight suits for damages aggregating $100,000, brought by a party of Boston tourists more than two years ago against the Yosemite Stage and Turnpike Company, have been settled out of court. The eight suits were for injuries sustained in an accident in June, 1911, when the plaintiffs visited California. A team ran away and all of the passengers were thrown to the ground. Two men were killed and six women were injured. Defective brakes were given as a cause of complaint. There were only six plaintiffs, but the wives of the two men that were killed brought two suits each, one for damages for the loss of the husband and the other for personal injuries sustained.

Women all over the state are expressing gratification because of the appointment of Miss Lillian R. Matthews, instructor at the University of California, as one of the three children's agents. The position is an important one, and it is upon the three women, two of them still to be appointed, that the control of the $860,000 mothers' pension fund will devolve. The three women will also have the supervision of forty-five orphanages of the state, and 7000 children in private homes who will draw state aid. Miss Matthews will act as president of the commission. The remuneration of Miss Matthews is $175 a month, which is the largest salary paid to any woman in the state's employ, with one exception.

To obtain evidence for the Government against Dr. John Grant Lyman, former head of the Panama Development Company and now in jail at Los Angeles, awaiting trial in the Federal Court on a charge of having used the mails to defraud, C. E. Webster, a postoffice inspector, left Los Angeles for Panama City, Panama. Inspector Webster said he would be away six weeks, during which period he expected to search official documents of the Republic of Panama to find records which Lyman planned to introduce as evidence in his own behalf. The principal search will be for a record relating to the so-called Agua Dulce

THIS COUNTY WILL TAKE PART IN PORTOLA FESTIVAL

San Mateo county will participate in the Portola Festival. That was the decision reached at an enthusiastic meeting held in San Mateo Tuesday night when the subject was taken up under the auspices of the Development Association by a large number of delegates, representing the civic and fraternal organizations of the county.

In opening the meeting, H. C. Tuchen, the chairman, stated that while the board of governors believed that it was an excellent opportunity for the county to advertise itself that the meeting had been called for the purpose of ascertaining the general sentiment as to participation before taking active steps toward that end. Ideas galore, both interesting and feasible, were advanced as the discussion progressed, the majority of the speakers, however, centering their remarks on the groundwork that a compact and unique showing, composed principally of floats, would best represent the interests of the Peninsula.

Paul T. Carroll, Colonel Filmer, Otto F. Shiller and Joseph L. Hickey, envoys of the festival committee, outlined the steps being taken to assure the success of the carnival and pledged the support of their organization in any manner they could render it. The meeting resulted in the formation of an executive committee of ten to take general charge of the participation of the county, composed of Mrs. A. L. McCollough, Mrs. H. C. Finkler, Mrs. L. M. Pfluger, W. J. Martin, P. Keary, A. J. Bodien, Ambrose McSweeney, M. B. Johnson, C. N. Kirkbride and C. C. Griffin. C. C. Griffin was selected to act as temporary chairman of the committee and Ambrose McSweeney as temporary secretary. The committee will hold a meeting next Tuesday night at San Mateo for the purpose of tackling their problem.

RAILROAD DISPUTE TO BE ARBITRATED

All three interests, people, railroad and employees, concerned in industrial disputes, will be represented on the new arbitration board that is to settle the question as to what constitutes electric street car service on the lines of the Southern Pacific Company. On behalf of the people, Max Thelan of the California State Railroad Commission, will be a member. Representing the employees, will be M. E. Montgomery, assistant chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. W. R. Scott, general manager of the Southern Pacific Company, will attend on behalf of the railroad. The arrangement is the result of a suggestion made by E. E. Calvin, vice-president of the Southern Pacific, to Commissioner G. W. W. Hangar of the board of mediation and conciliation, that he name a State Railroad Commissioner. Under the agreement which settled the threatened strike of trainmen, the status of street car service was to be submitted to the board of arbitration, one member to be chosen by each side and the third by Commissioner Hangar. Hangar has named Thelan. The date set for the hearing is September 1st, and the three are given thirty days in which to reach a decision.

The railroad company contends that certain of its electric cars in Alameda county, which are operated under a street car franchise and stop at every crossing, should be run on a different basis from through suburban service stopping only at regular stations.

This triangular board is a striking illustration of the change in attitude toward strikes in the last few years. Its formation recognizes that the people are entitled to have something to say in transportation matters, and that the railroad company and the men both realize it. Coming from the railroad, the suggestion that the people's representative be included indicates closer co-operation between the two in the future.

COUNTY ROAD WORK WILL START WHEN BONDS ARE SOLD

The board of supervisors adopted a resolution on last Monday to the effect that they will not consider any offers to purchase county road bonds until the amount of $352,000 is subscribed and that when the same are purchased that the following work shall be completed: The Bay Shore road from the northerly limits of South San Francisco to the state highway at Uncle Tom's Cabin; the Hillsborough, San Mateo and Redwood City portions of the El Camino Real; grading of the coast road between Colma and Montara; grading of the road between Tunitas and San Gregorio; grading of the new location of the Belmont to Crystal Springs road; building of the Woodside road between Redwood City and the Woodside grade.

Dr. C. L. Morgan of the county fair commission on Wednesday signed with exposition officials a contract, subject to approval of the board of supervisors, for 3000 square feet of exhibition space in the California building of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The space acquired for this county adjoins, on the ground floor, the Scott street entrance to the building, and is a most desirable location as it is also true with the small amount upstairs.

TRY FOR $15 PRIZE

The local Chamber of Commerce has offered a prize of $15 to the resident of this city who will select the most suitable slogan for advertising the industrial city of South San Francisco. No limit to the number each contestant may select. They must be sent to the secretary in sealed envelopes before 4 p. m. September 17th next, when the contest will close. Now, people of this progressive industrial city, get busy and try to win this splendid prize of $15. All you have to do is to use your brains, select a few suitable names and you may win it.

AN EXCURSION TO SOLANO ON SUNDAY

Owing to the unabated demand for Solano land and Solano City lots, A. J. Rich & Co. will run another excursion on Sunday over the Southern Pacific road, but hope by the following week to use the Oakland and Antioch.

Night and day shifts are rushing the electric line to completion, and it is expected that the schedules for the Solano City service will be ready for publication by September 1st.

Surprised by the rapid sale of lots in the business district, the Solano company this week is getting out specifications for street work and sidewalks for Main street, and rush orders have been given for work on sewer and water systems.

Federal Army of the Cumberland Marches to Attack Chattanooga---A Campaign of Strategy---Confederates Fortify the Place---Federals Feign a Direct Assault and Throw Shells Into the Streets---Importance of Chattanooga to the South---The Evacuation of Fort Sumter Demanded by the Federals---A Gun on Morris Island Known as the "Swamp Angel" Throws "Greek Fire" Into the Heart of Charleston.

By Capt. GEORGE L. KILMER, late U. S. V.
DURING the last week in August, 1863, the first steps were taken and the first shots fired in the Federal campaign for Chattanooga. The end did not come until the last of November. Incidental to the general operations were the campaign and battle of Chickamauga in September.

The Confederate Army of the Tennessee had marched from Chattanooga northward in the summer of 1862 under General Braxton Bragg to invade Kentucky. Two fruitless battles followed. Defeated and turned back, Bragg had clung to central Tennessee as a base for a new attempt to cross the Ohio river and draw the Federals after him. So doing, he would protect Chattanooga, the Richmond of the west.

Battle Deferred by Federal Strategy

It had not been the fault of General Bragg that the summer of 1863 passed land mountains and the Tennessee river were barriers facing Rosecrans when he broke camp on the Duck river line the middle of August to again get in touch with Bragg. Having opened the campaign with a brilliant and successful stroke of strategy, the Federal commander decided to try it a second time, even at the risk of being detected in repeating a former movement.

Nature had done much to make the route between Duck river and Chattanooga impossible for an army having active foes in its front. It was only necessary for Bragg to fill up a few gaps and Chattanooga was safe. "The Tennessee will be taken as our line," said Bragg. He sent cavalry into the mountain passes to head off Rosecrans and fortified the crossings of the Tennessee above and below Chattanooga. Behind the city, on Mission ridge, he began building earthworks.

A Wide Flank March.

General Bragg took it for granted with great difficulty Gillmore's engineers had planted an eight inch 200 pounder Parrott rifle in a marsh on a foundation of piles and barricaded with sandbags which the soldiers had carried on their backs. This gun was christened the "Swamp Angel." For the first discharge it was sighted a trifle to the left of the steeple of old St. Michael's church, the heart at least of aristocratic Charleston.

Greek Fire Hurlled Into Charleston.
 After allowing a reasonable time for the message to do its work and getting no response, Gillmore ordered an expert marksman to open fire. At 1:30 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 22 the "Swamp Angel" sent a shell whizzing past the church steeple. Bells and whistles in the city promptly aroused the sleeping populace.

Sixteen Shells in All Were Fired that Morning.

Of these twelve were charged with an inflammable fluid and four with "solidified Greek fire." During the forenoon Gillmore received a message from Beauregard protesting in a general way against bombarding a city filled with old men, women and children without the customary notice of one to three days to enable them to move out of danger. To this was added a sharp rebuke in these words: "Your firing of the most destructive missiles ever used in war into the midst of a city taken unawares and filled with sleeping women and children will give you a bad eminence in history."

Next day twenty more shells, all filled with "Greek fire," were discharged from the gun in the marsh. On the twentieth discharge the breech of the gun blew out and the piece was dismounted. From the time of the first discharge until the last the "Swamp Angel" was the special target of thirteen Confederate guns and mortars. No damage was done, for, as a rule, the shells buried themselves in the mud before exploding.

The shells of the "Swamp Angel" flew toward St. Michael's steeple, but, as a rule, fell short and dropped into the streets and vacant lots, exploding as they struck. One ignited some loose paper in a warehouse which it entered, but the flames were soon quelled. Non-combatants left the city in streams and foreign consuls made a vigorous protest against the bombardment with "Greek fire."

Perennials Are Pretty.

At odd times plant hardy flowering perennials along the fence near the public road. They can often be dug in the woods or back lots and will cost only a few minutes' time to transplant. But they'll gladden the hearts of all who see them.

TARGETS IN THE HEART OF CHARLESTON FIRED AT BY THE "SWAMP ANGEL"

without a fight to the finish in central Tennessee between his force and the Federal Army of the Cumberland. He had been ready to fight on ground of his own choosing. His opponent, General W. S. Rosecrans, was a ready fighter also, but he also wanted to choose the battleground.

Bragg lay behind fortifications along Duck river until Rosecrans moved his guns and battalions around him so that he had no choice but to fight in the open or retreat the third time within the year. During July he retreated to Chattanooga, where he could place river and mountain between his army and its foe.

The Sequatchie river, the Cumberland mountains and the Tennessee river were barriers facing Rosecrans when he broke camp on the Duck river line the middle of August to again get in touch with Bragg. Having opened the campaign with a brilliant and successful stroke of strategy, the Federal commander decided to try it a second time, even at the risk of being detected in repeating a former movement.

Nature had done much to make the route between Duck river and Chattanooga impossible for an army having active foes in its front. It was only necessary for Bragg to fill up a few gaps and Chattanooga was safe. "The Tennessee will be taken as our line," said Bragg. He sent cavalry into the mountain passes to head off Rosecrans and fortified the crossings of the Tennessee above and below Chattanooga. Behind the city, on Mission ridge, he began building earthworks.

FLYING WIND

Her Illusions Soon Vanish

By JEFFERSON PORT

"You sure are a little wild Indian, Bess," reproved Phil Dawson as they rode away from the small circus that had pitched its tent on the outskirts of Red Brick.

Bess looked up quickly, and the moonlight was reflected in the bright pools of her eyes.

"You mean my entering the cowboy race?" she asked sharply.

"Yes."

"I won!" she exclaimed, flourishing the silver spurs that jingled from a twisted ribbon on her wrist. "Besides, Annie Larsen was in the race. I wasn't the only woman."

"I know, but Annie Larsen does lots of things that I don't want you to do when you are my wife."

"When I am your wife? I'll never be your wife. So there!" blazed Bess wrathfully. "I'm tired of your nagging, Phil Dawson. I'd rather be a circus rider than marry you."

"Do you mean that, Bess?" asked Phil in a queer voice.

"Yes, and we may as well part now. Here is your ring."

Two days later Phil Dawson learned that Bessie Madison had left home, taking her favorite pony with her. Her stepmother, who was about to be married again, was openly relieved by the girl's departure, and, while she affected to know that Bess had gone to Chicago, no one was certain what had become of their favorite.

It came early summer, and in an Ohio village the circus was in full swing. It was a small circus, but well equipped. The tent was roomy, the animals were sleek and well fed, and the performers were a well dressed, sober company.

A frock coated, silk hatted man came out and announced the opening attraction—the famous Buzon brothers, kings of the trapeze.

While the villagers hung open mouthed on these hairbreadth acts, Bessie Madison peered wistfully from one of the canvas doors that formed the performer's entrance.

She wore a khaki divided skirt and blouse laced with a red silk cord, a leather banded sombrero, brown boots and leggings and fringed and beaded gauntlet gloves. In one hand she carried a Mexican quilt.

Bessie Madison looked older, sadder eyed. If she regretted her hasty action in flinging off Phil Dawson no one should know it; if her eyes hungrily scanned each audience the country over, hoping to see his keen, dark gaze searching for her, no one was the wiser.

"Of course he wouldn't be out here in Ohio with the spring roundup coming on," murmured Bessie, closing her eyes for an instant. Angry at her own weakness, she snapped out suddenly, "I wouldn't speak to him if he was here, either."

"What is it, dearie?" asked Mme. Hufia, the tight rope dancer, laying a carefully powdered hand on Bessie's shoulder.

"Nothing much," smiled Bessie.

"That pink is the most becoming costume you've got, madame."

"Thank you, dearie; that's good to hear," laughed the other pleasantly. "Have you seen the new star attraction yet?"

"No. Has he arrived?"

"Joined the show this afternoon. Peterson says he is some wonder too! Can ride a bucking broncho to a finish and does some fancy riding. Callicoon is his name."

Bessie turned indifferently away. She was not interested.

It was her turn to go on after the Callicoon act. She mounted her little brown pony and waited near the entrance for her call. There was a little confusion behind her, and a great cream colored horse dashed past her with a man dressed in yellow standing on his back.

"Callicoon! Ain't he a wonder?" whispered Mme Hufia in her ear.

Bessie nodded. Her eyes followed the flashing yellow satin figure of the rider as it showed against the dark masses of onlookers, saw him enter the ring and witnessed his daring riding on the unsaddled horse. Never could she catch a glimpse of his face, for the lights were ill arranged, and always some head or shoulder of her companions blocked the way when his face was turned in her direction.

Suddenly he stripped off the yellow satin costume, flung it to an attendant and showed himself dressed in the costume of the plains. Some one tossed him a broad brimmed hat, and he crammed it on his head and with one graceful movement left the back of the cream horse and dropped lightly into the saddle of a vicious little broncho which had been led to the ring.

The ring was cleared instantly, and Callicoon was alone with the beast he was expected to conquer.

For an instant they stood motionless—the grizzled broncho and the dark eyed, keen faced man, his lean brown hand gripping the bridle.

The broncho rolled a reddened eye and neighed shrilly. His head went between his fore legs; his heels flew up.

Callicoon's knees gripped the wiry little shoulders. The man seemed part of the beast. The battle was on, and the onlookers watched breathlessly. Which would win?

There was a thunder of applause as Callicoon rode away on his conquered animal, and it was Bess' turn to go on. Her act was a thrilling one. The beautiful daughter of a rancher is pursued by Indians on the plains and is finally rescued by a cowboy. The daring riders on the fleet footed ponies always drew applause from the crowd.

Bessie felt dizzy as she rode into the tent. Her pony leaped forward at the word of command and raced around the grassy track. Behind her half a dozen Indians on sweating horses streamed after her, whooping madly and waving tomahawks. Twice around the track was the course, and then the rescuing cowboy would enter the chase.

Thump, thump, thump, went the hoofs on the turf. Bessie looked behind her at the painted Indians approaching so near. She felt, with a thrill of terror, that she was losing her nerve. Once as a little child she had been horrified at the sight of an Indian raid, a mock invasion of Red Brick by a band of drunken Apaches, and she felt the old terror creeping over her now at sight of the ugly painted faces so close behind.

Bessie glanced over her shoulder and saw coming up the track a bay horse with a white blazed forehead. On his back was a cowboy in swift pursuit of the Indians. Now was the time to crown her act with its most daring performance.

There was a flash of her slim, brown clad form, and she was standing on the saddle, her little brown pony tearing around the track in half crazed delight in the contest of speed and daring.

The Indians yelled. The gun of the pursuing cowpuncher barked up at the roof of the tent and lent excitement to the scene. Bessie turned her head again. There was a strange familiarity about that blazed sorrel horse.

Her foot slipped, the brown pony swerved suddenly, and Bessie fell heavily across the saddle, her foot feeling for the stirrup. Her need for help was desperate now. The crowd cheered wildly at what they believed to be a new deed of daring. The Indians screeched madly. But underlying the noise was the steady beating of the sorrel's hoofs, the baritone music of a man's voice calling over and over again: "Steady, there—just a moment! Steady, there, girl! I'll be there!"

Just when she felt herself slipping from the saddle, where she would fall under the rushing feet of the Indian ponies, there came the sweeping rush of the sorrel. A strong arm pulled her from the brown pony's back to a safe refuge, and Bessie Madison promptly fainted for the first time in her life, while the audience thundered applause at the daring rescue, not knowing that they were witnessing grim reality instead of an Indian play.

"Good for you, Callicoon!" cried

Peterson, the manager, as the new rider gently handed down Bessie's unconscious form. "The girl has lost her nerve lately. I've been going to advise her to take a rest. Seems to be always watching the audiences. She is like a homesick cat. There, Hufia; give her another dose of the ice water. That's bringing her around! I've got to go on!"

He dashed away, and Callicoon was left alone with Mme. Hufia and Bessie Madison. There came a call for the tight rope dancer.

"I'll stay with her," said the new rider, and he picked up a fan and sat down in Mme. Hufia's vacant seat.

Bessie opened her eyes and looked sadly at him. Then the lids drooped, and tears fell from the long lashes and rolled down her thin cheeks.

Callicoon took out a handkerchief and gently wiped the tears away.

"Don't, Phil," whispered Bessie. "You are so good. It hurts me. I don't deserve it."

"You can't be blamed for being a foolish little girl," growled Phil, continuing to dry the tears and then to add familiar pats to the slowly reddening cheek. "If you're bound to stay in the show business, Bess, I'll stay with you, and the ranch can go to grass. But I wish you wanted to come home."

"You wouldn't want such a wicked, ill tempered wife," sobbed Bessie.

"I'll take a chance," grinned Phil. "Is it the show—or what?"

"It's home, Phil, dear," whispered the disillusioned circus lady meekly.

AN ARTISTIC SUIT.

Sartorial Inspiration From the Orient.

OF CRAPE TUSSORE IN BROCADED DESIGN

This novelty tailored suit designed for the autumn is made by a famous dressmaking establishment of Paris. The fabric is crape tussore in a brocaded pattern. The suit is trimmed with printed silk in Post-Impressionist effect and with plaited chiffon. The coat is a modified cutaway affair, showing vest and skirt of an oriental type and a tunic of brown chiffon. The inspiration is derived from modern art and oriental form.

Use For Old Mat.

If you have a rubber doormat you are not using for its specific purpose or if you can get another mat for the door and put the rubber mat in the kitchen you will not regret the change. Placed in front of the sink, before which the cook must stand so much, it will afford great relief to the feet. Notwithstanding so much has been said and written about women sitting to do what work they can, the majority will stand, and if anything so easy to provide as a rubber mat will add to their comfort it should be furnished.

The Pocket Workbox.

The tidy and provident woman will delight in the rolls containing cottons and needles of such convenient size that they may be carried in the purse or pocket. The rolls, which are made of leather fastened with a patent snap, contain three small reels of cotton, a needle book and thimble.

Cookery Points

Preserving Pickles.

In picking vegetables and fruits the first idea is to employ a means of preserving these foods for a considerable length of time, generally until the winter, when there is a scarcity or utter lack of fresh fruits and green vegetables. For this purpose salt or acid liquor is used. In vinegar pickles the addition of spices and sugar aid in preserving and increasing the palatableness of pickles. The sweeping condemnation against all pickles and condiments is ill advised and misleading to those who depend on authoritative and official information in the line of dietetics, says Lida Ames Willis.

There is a large class of persons who should avoid pickles or the use of acids of any kind. Nature or the abnormal condition of the system will soon demonstrate the danger of indulgence by the discomfort caused by too much acidity in the stomach. Do not eat pickles unless you crave them, and if after eating them, as an accessory, not in a large quantity, you feel no ill effect, but, on the other hand, assimilate your food properly, you may consider pickles are wholesome in your individual case at least.

(Note.—In all vegetable pickles, cat-sups and sauces the addition of fresh grated horseradish will add greatly to the "goodness" and preserve the vinegar, preventing any mold.)

Dressing For the Pickles.

One gallon cider vinegar, a dozen tablespoonfuls mustard or a jug of French mustard, two cupfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of turmeric powder, one large cupful of flour wet with little cold vinegar; put into the boiling vinegar, boil five minutes and then pour over the thoroughly drained pickles. These are the finest mixed pickles you ever made. If you like string beans in pickles put in two quarts, steamed and cut in inch pieces. The turmeric powder gives the rich yellow color.

Mrs. Grant's French Pickle.

Slice into a stoneware or earthen jar a peck of green tomatoes and six large Mexican onions. Pour over them a cupful of salt. Let stand for twenty-four hours and strain off the liquid. Dissolve three pounds of sugar in a quart of good cider vinegar. Add quarter of a pound of white mustard seed, loose, and one teaspoonful each of ground ginger and cloves; two teaspoonfuls of mustard and one of cayenne pepper. Turn in the tomatoes and onions and cook gently for about fifteen minutes, then pack in glass or stoneware jars.

Capital Mixed Pickles.

One peck green tomatoes, ten onions, ten sweet green peppers, chopped all together and fine; one cup salt mixed through them. Let stand over night. Drain and press out all the liquid and put into a porcelain lined kettle with a pound of brown sugar, half a cup fresh grated horseradish, a tablespoonful each ground black pepper, mustard, celery seed and whole of white mustard seed. Cover with good vinegar and boil gently for an hour.

Sandwich Fillings.

Ripe bananas, mashed, seasoned with lemon juice and sweetened to taste, make a hearty sandwich filling. The bread on which this filling is spread should be only lightly buttered.

A sandwich filling with a flavor which puzzles is made by mixing half a cupful of grated maple sugar with a quarter of a cupful of chopped roasted peanuts and a tablespoonful of sweet cream. This filling is delicious on either brown or white bread.

Fish sandwiches are appetizing. Fish paste is now sold ready for use either in glass jars or tubes. It may also be prepared at home by freeing any cold cooked fish from bones and skin and mincing it. It should then be mixed to a paste with highly seasoned mayonnaise. If the fish is oily a good deal of lemon juice, vinegar or chopped capers may be used.

Cream of Onion Soup.

Slice sufficient white onions to measure one and a half cupfuls. Heat two tablespoonfuls of butter in a large pan, add the onions and cook slowly, shaking now and then until the onions are tender, but hardly beginning to color. Sprinkle over them two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until absorbed. Add gradually one quart of hot milk, stirring that it may thicken evenly. When at the boiling point season, draw to one side and let simmer ten minutes. Rub through a sieve, return to the fire and serve hot.
